Garbage has not been collected in my locality for three days. What should I do?U09:10 pm

CA

Here's what you can do when household waste hasn't been collected for several days:
1. Identify the exact location - Note the street name, ward number (if you know it), and any nearby landmarks (e.g., the corner of Main Road and the community center).
2. Contact the responsible authority -

- Call the municipal corporation's solid waste helpline (often listed on the city's website or on your ward office notice boards).
- If your city has a civic grievance app (e.g., "Swachh Bharat App" or a local "Municipal Grievance Portal"), submit a missed-collection report there.

3. Document the issue - Take a quick photo of the overflowing bin or the street where waste is piled up, and include the date and time in your complaint.
4. Follow up - After you file the report, you should receive a reference number. Keep that number handy and call back after 24 hours if the waste is still not cleared.
5. Escalate if needed - If the problem persists beyond two more collection cycles, you can raise the issue with the municipal commissioner's office or the State Pollution Control Board (especially if the waste is starting to affect public health or the environment).
Has this resolved your issue, or is the problem still ongoing?
